Dear Friends,

It is with great pleasure and pride that I welcome you to our 17th basketball tournament and gala. Over the past 16 years, the Children's Charities Foundation (CCF) has been able to distribute more than $8.2 million dollars in grants to organizations that serve children in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area.

All of us associated with the BB&T Classic and CCF feel privileged to be able to have an impact on our community during these difficult economic times. There are countless families dealing with unemployment, poverty, inadequate medical care, and homelessness. Many nonprofits are struggling to stay afloat. The money that we raise can make the difference in keeping an essential program alive. It is in these areas that we want to focus our efforts.

In January 2009, CCF began a new program – Coats for Kids. Each year, new winter coats, purchased through a special arrangement with our regional partner, Lord and Taylor, are distributed to needy children throughout the Washington, D.C. metro region. In 2009, on the Martin Luther King holiday, volunteers gathered at the Verizon Center to help distribute 500 new winter coats to children. In 2011 we distributed more than 1,300 coats and look forward to distributing at least 1,200 coats in January 2012.

We have three wonderful events to advance our cause – the BB&T Basketball Classic, the "BasketBALL" Gala, and our annual golf tournament. The BB&T Classic has become a unique tradition to Washington, D.C. More than 30 visiting teams and four National Champions have come to play in this annual event. The University of Maryland Terrapins and the George Washington University Colonials have served as the host teams every year. We are most grateful to these two Universities for their continued dedication to their home communities.

Finally, on behalf of the Board of Directors, I want to express our deep appreciation to BB&T. The generosity of all who work there and their spirit of giving is a wonderful example for all of corporate America.

Thanks to all of you for your support. Have a great time, and let's keep working together for our children.

Best wishes,

Dear Friends,

Welcome to the 17th Annual BB&T Classic Basketball Tournament in support of The Children's Charities Foundation. I am honored to have the privilege to serve as this year's Chair.

The economic challenges facing the charitable organizations here in Greater Washington are more pronounced than ever. It is your support today that will make the difference in the lives of hundreds of disadvantaged children.

At BB&T, our mission includes making the communities we serve better places to live. My commitment to assist in our communities is only surpassed by the enthusiasm and dedication of our entire BB&T team. We are proud to be a continuing sponsor of the BB&T Classic.

On behalf of the BB&T team, thank you for supporting The Children's Charities Foundation. Together, we are making a difference!

Enjoy the games!

Sincerely,

The VCU

RAMS

After putting together one of the most historic runs in NCAA Tournament history last March, the Black & Gold are reloaded and ready to continue to brand VCU as one of the top mid-major programs in the country.

Leading the Rams for the third straight year will be Head Coach Shaka Smart, who inked an eight-year extension after the run to the 2011 Final Four. Smart led VCU to 55 wins in his first two seasons, the most over any two-year span in school history.

Smart will be guiding a very talented, but very young group with a combined 12 years of college basketball experience. In terms of college basketball experience, the Black & Gold are the 10th youngest team in the country.

A vital part of the success will rely on the lone senior on this year's roster, Bradford Burgess, who was named to the Preseason All-CAA squad by the coaches and media. Burgess, who was selected as the Preseason CAA Player of the Year by Sporting News, averaged 14.3 points last season, while he also finished in the CAA's top 10 in field goal, free throw and 3-point shooting percentage.

During the Rams unforgettable run to the Final Four, Burgess was named to the Southwest Region All-Tournament team after he averaged 15.7 points, seven rebounds and nearly two blocked shots during the six NCAA Tournament games.

The Midlothian, Va. native has started every game since arriving at VCU in 2008, entering this season with a streak of 110 consecutive starts, the second-longest streak in school history.

Burgess will be leaning on many of his younger teammates ability to step into new roles, including junior point guard Darius Theus, who takes over after the graduation of two-year starter Joey Rodriguez.

Theus, a Portsmouth, Va. native, averaged just over 15 minutes per game last year, posting an assist-to-turnover ratio over 1.5 for the Black & Gold. The 6-3 guard will bring a different look to the Rams this year with an innate ability to get into the lane and create plays for his teammates. He is an ideal fit on the defensive end for Coach Smart's HAVOC system, racking up 81 steals over his first two seasons.

Fellow junior Troy Daniels had a big offseason and will battle for a starting spot as the sharp-shooter is widely known for his ability to knock down the long-range jumper. After missing 11 games last year with a foot injury, Daniels joined Theus in a 10-day excursion to Europe this past summer with Global Sports Academy. The highlight of the trip game in the final game when Daniels dropped 41 points, including 28 in the first half and a total of nine three-pointers in the contest.

Also battling for a starting spot in the backcourt will be sophomore Rob Brandenburg, who showed flashes of his potential last season with 20-plus point outings on the road at William & Mary and at home against George State. He is also most famous for blocking Chris Singleton's final shot attempt during VCU's crazy, 72-71 overtime victory over Florida State in the Sweet Sixteen. On the year, he averaged 4.9 points and 1.7 rebounds for the Rams.

Adding valuable depth to VCU's backcourt will be the freshmen quartet of Briante Weber, Treveon Graham, Teddy Okerefor and Reco McCarter. Weber brings a relentless energy to the court on both the offensive and defensive ends, while Graham supplies the Black & Gold with a big-time scoring threat. Okerefor is a patient point guard who has an ability to create plays for his teammates, while McCarter may be the most athletic player on VCU's roster.

In the frontcourt, Smart will look for sophomores D.J. Haley and Juvonte Reddic to develop into big time threats, both offensively and defensively.

Haley, who started the final 11 games of the 2011-12 campaign, gives the Black & Gold a big body in the middle, who showed flashes of his potential throughout the NCAA Tournament, including a six-point, three-rebound performance against Purdue.

Reddic is recognized as a freak athlete that continues to develop physically, adding nearly 15 pounds to his frame during the offseason. The Winston-Salem, N.C. native has an unbelievable ability to run the floor and create HAVOC on both the side of the court. He twice scored in double-figures, including a 12 point outing against Purdue.

Redshirt junior David Hinton is a walk-on that provides a hard work ethic and an ability to rebound the basketball, while the freshmen duo of Heath Houston and Jarred Guest will look to make an immediate impact on the Black & Gold.

Houston brings a 6-8, 230-pound frame to the VCU frontcourt and showed great progress in the off-season workouts. He became well-known during the NCAA Tournament for his locker room dances, particularly after upsets of Florida State and Kansas.

Guest is a versatile forward who can score from all over the court, while bring an unlimited defensive energy and ability to block shots.

Even with the 10th-youngest team in the country, the Rams were selected third in the CAA Preseason Poll and will be looking to get earn the program's fourth NCAA Tournament berth in the past six seasons.

The George Washington

COLONIALS

There's a new feeling in the air as the George Washington men's basketball team takes the court for the 2011-12 season. A new head coach, coaching staff and athletic director, a revamped schedule and a polished and transformed Charles E. Smith Center are the key changes that have provided a renewed sense of excitement in Foggy Bottom and amongst Colonials' supporters.

Along with all the changes, there's plenty of familiarity back at GW as well with four starters and 10 letterwinners returning to a team that won 17 games and tied for fourth in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

It's with this experienced roster that first-year head coach Mike Lonergan looks to chart the Colonials on a new course directed toward postseason success and enhanced support behind the men's basketball program.

"We have to win games and play an exciting brand of basketball," said Coach Lonergan. "It's based on the product you put on the court. We have a nice core group of players returning, and if they play hard and play exciting, they will gain the respect of the fans so they will come out and support us."

Lonergan, a Bowie, Md., native, returns to his roots after six seasons as head coach at Vermont, one of the most successful mid-major programs in the nation during his tenure. In 18 years of head coaching experience, Lonergan owns an overall record of 377-156, with 15 winning seasons and 13 NCAA Tournament victories, including a NCAA Division III National Championship at Catholic University, his alma mater, in 2001.

"I have always talked about this job [at GW], if it ever came open, that it is the perfect fit for me," said Coach Lonergan.

Hired in May, he takes over a program that returns six of its top seven scorers from last season. However, GW failed to advance past the first round of the A-10 Championship for a fourth straight season and was picked to finish eighth in the conference in 2011-12, both facts that will serve a purpose during his first season at the helm.

"This is great motivation for us," said Coach Lonergan. "Preseason predictors are looking at we lost in the first round the last four years, but they're not looking at we tied for fourth in the conference. We're saying we have one of the stronger backcourts and some experience back."

While excited for the coming campaign, Coach Lonergan realizes there will be an adjustment period as players work with his new coaching staff and learn a new system. “The goal is more to improve and be a lot better in March than the start of practice Oct. 14. If we can stay healthy, hopefully we will have a good season.”

Anchoring the Colonials’ returners and strong backcourt is 6-foot-1 senior point guard Tony Taylor, the team’s Most Valuable Player who led the Colonials in scoring, assists and steals last season. Taylor ranked 12th in the A-10 in scoring at 15.0 points per game and finished third in the league with 4.6 assists per game to earn Second Team All-Atlantic 10 honors. He enters his final season just 60 points shy of becoming the 43rd member of GW’s 1,000-point club.

Despite the success and accolades, one outlet has pegged Taylor the league’s most underrated player, a label Coach Lonergan envisions his floor general shedding this season. “It is strange to see a senior as underrated. I told him it is time for him to not be underrated anymore, but to be a First Team All-Conference player.” The league’s head coaches sided with Coach Lonergan by bestowing First Team All-Atlantic 10 honors on Taylor prior to the start of the 2011-12 season.

Another key player should be 6-foot-5 junior shooting guard Lasan Kromah, who missed last season with a foot injury. As a freshman, Kromah averaged 11.8 points per game and converted a team-high 48 three-pointers, to make the 2010 A-10 All Rookie Team.

Taylor and Kromah should give the Colonials a strong backcourt, Coach Lonergan said, with shooting guards Aaron Ware and Bryan Byne as key reserves. Ware, a 6-foot-5 senior, averaged 5.4 points and 3.8 rebounds per game last season, while Byne, a 6-foot-3 junior, averaged 6.1 points.

Anchoring the frontcourt are forwards Dwayne Smith, a 6-foot-6 junior, and Nemanja Mikic, a 6-foot-8 sophomore. Last season, Smith was second on the team in scoring, with 9.3 points per game, and rebounding, with 5.1 rebounds per game. Mikic was GW’s best three-point shooter at 43.6 percent from three-point range. In reserve at forward is David Pellom, a 6-foot-8 junior who led the Colonials in rebounding with 5.2 rebounds per game and averaged 6.7 points per game.

One question mark is center, which is wide open, according to Coach Lonergan. Last season’s starter, Jabari Edwards, played 16 games due to knee problems. Coach Lonergan said the 6-foot-10, fifth-year senior has a lot of athleticism but is concerned about his durability. This could lead to some opportunities for freshmen John Kopriva and Jonathan Davis. Kopriva, 6-foot-8 power forward from Wauwatosa, Wis., averaged 14 points and 6 rebounds while shooting 58 percent as a senior last season at Milwaukee’s Marquette University High School. Davis is a 6-foot-7 forward from Simi Valley, Calif., who averaged 18.7 points and 10.4 rebounds on 53 percent shooting as a senior at Simi Valley High School, including one 40-point game.

The Notre Dame

FIGHTING IRISH

Notre Dame's record-setting 27-7 campaign in 2010-11 may be a distant memory, but to those returning, the feeling of disappointment following a third-round exit still remains strong as the Irish are set to usher in the 107th season in program history.

Beginning his 12th season along the sidelines, Mike Brey will rely on a heavy dose of patience early on as he adjusts his lineups and rotations. Known as a coach who gets the most out of his players, one of Brey's hallmarks always has been player development.

The loss of three starters will certainly test his patience early on as Notre Dame looks to build a nucleus and foundation that it hopes will earn the Irish a sixth consecutive 20-win campaign and third straight NCAA tournament berth.

Following the graduation of Ben Hansbrough (2011 BIG EAST Coach of the Year and an NCAA second team consensus All-American), Tyrone Nash (two-year starter and second-leading rebounder) and Carleton Scott (leading rebounder), the Irish will count greatly on the experience and leadership of fifth-year senior forwards Tim Abromaitis and Scott Martin. The duo, who will serve as co-captains this season, were certainly keys to Notre Dame's success a year ago.

With so many experienced players a year ago, we were nearly a finished product before the season began. This year is different, and because of our youth, the players we have to work with and the potential that we have for improvement throughout the entire season will motivate me. I also am anxious to watch Tim and Scott lead this team as they are clearly our commanders both on the court and in the locker room."

Notre Dame has enjoyed tremendous success and consistency throughout the past four basketball campaigns. Since the 2007-08 season, Irish teams have posted a 96-42 mark for a .696 winning percentage. The 96 wins represent the most in program history over a four-year span. In addition, Brey has guided his squads to the most BIG EAST regular-season victories (46) in school history as the Irish have posted a 46-26 (.639) record.

With Abromaitis and Martin there will be plenty of competition for the remaining three starting positions on the floor and for playing time off the bench.

Look for junior forward Jack Cooley and sophomore point guard Eric Atkins to have firm grasps on the two other starting positions. Atkins saw action in all 34 contests while averaging 25.4 minutes a game a year ago as a backup to Hansbrough, while Cooley also played in every game and averaged 10.3 minutes per contest.

Beyond those four, the final starting spot will certainly be up for grabs as will significant playing minutes.

Brey will rely heavily on Abromaitis' leadership and confidence this season.

Last season, he averaged 15.4 ppg. and grabbed a career-high 6.1 rebounds. He became the 51st player in Notre Dame history to reach the 1,000-point mark and has scored more than 1,000 points over the past two seasons.

A third-team all-BIG EAST selection year ago, and preseason first-team all-BIG EAST pick to start the '11-'12 campaign, he connected on 47.0 percent of his shots during his career and 42.2 percent from three-point range.

Martin really emerged as a key player for the Irish throughout the second half of the season a year ago. After transferring to Notre Dame in June of 2008, he sat out the 2008-09 campaign and then missed the 2009-10 season after suffering a torn ACL in October of '09. He really found his stride toward the end of January and carried that momentum during the final two months of the season. Martin averaged 9.7 points and 4.8 rebounds and displayed a versatility in his game with his ability to score from nearly anywhere on the court.

Cooley will look to emerge as a force on the frontline. Playing a backup role in his first two seasons, he is primed to make a big jump in his junior year.

One of the team's most physical players, he is as strong as any Irish player around the basket. With the loss of Tyrone Nash and Carleton Scott, Notre Dame is going to need Cooley to assert himself around the boards as both a rebounder and scorer.

Cooley averaged 3.7 points and 3.1 rebounds a year ago, but look for those averages to jump during the upcoming season as he looks to spend longer stretches of time on the court.

Mike Broghammer's playing time was limited in the second half of the year as he battled knee injuries and surgery. In two seasons, he has played in 23 contests overall and averaged 1.8 points and 1.0 rebounds. Broghammer can take up space inside with his body and if he stays healthy, will see playing time and be someone Brey and his staff can count on coming off the bench.

After sitting out his freshman season in 2009-10, Tom Knight saw action in 14 games and averaged 1.4 points during his sophomore campaign. His all-around skills could make him a very effective player in the lineup this season.

Atkins will begin his second season with the Irish program as Notre Dame's floor general. Atkins, who played in all 34 games and earned six starts during his freshman season, averaged 5.8 points and 3.2 assists and led the BIG EAST Conference in assist-to-turnover ratio. Brey will look to Atkins to play heavy minutes this season as the lone true point guard on the Irish roster.

One of the team's best defenders and screeners, Joey Brooks is looking to become a big part of Notre Dame's rotation as he begins his third year in the program.

Brooks has a good offensive game, but it will be his defensive game that will be his greatest strength during the upcoming season.

No player may show more improvement and upside this season than Alex Dragicevich. He has great versatility in his game both as a shooter and in his ability to handle the basketball. Dragicevich could see time at point guard when Eric Atkins is not on the floor.

Jerian Grant did not play in his freshman season, giving him a year to learn Mike Brey's system. Grant battled a stress fracture last year, but he heads into the season at 100 percent. He and Atkins could be Notre Dame's starting backcourt to start the season.

Pat Connaughton, the lone freshman on the Irish roster, is going to see playing time immediately and will be on the court for Notre Dame for extended minutes.

He brings a toughness and edge to the Irish and knows how to play the game at both ends of the floor. Mike Brey expects him to be an outstanding addition this season.

The Maryland TERRAPINS

The fist pump may be gone, but the passion and intensity will be familiar. One of the nation's best young coaches in Mark Turgeon takes over a Maryland basketball program steeped in tradition and looking to move toward a bright future.

The accolades upon Turgeon's arrival were broad and convincing. The job of being the coach who follows the now-retired Gary Williams falls on talented shoulders.

Turgeon's first Terrapin team will feature a veteran backcourt and a group that is preparing for the upcoming season with a heightened focus.

"I think our strength right now is our chemistry and togetherness," said Turgeon. "Guys are kind of practicing with a chip on their shoulder. Everybody is telling them how bad they're going to be. We've had great workouts so far. It's early, but they've been really determined and they're all on the same page.

"I've been surprised across the board. I think each player individually is a little better than I was anticipating. I've seen great work habits. James Padgett has been a real pleasant surprise, and so has Berend Weijs."

Turgeon said the level of play most players see prior to college helps prepare them.

"The inexperience doesn't bother me," he said. "Kids are kids – they grow up playing at high levels in AAU ball and high-school ball. Kids are so advanced today. Every player who's on our roster right now, whether he's a senior or freshman, is ready to help us."

Sean Mosley is Maryland's lone fourth-year player and Turgeon said he's ready to assume the leadership role that comes with being the experienced guy.

"Sean has been a great leader," said Turgeon. "You can tell it's definitely his team. He wants it to be his team. I think Sean is going to have a terrific year... He's really playing with a lot of confidence right now."

Mosley is second among returnees in the Atlantic Coast Conference with 76 career starts. Already with 117 career steals, Mosley could finish the season among the Terps' all-time leaders in that category.

The other returning starter is guard Terrell Stoglin. A member of the ACC All-Freshman Team a year ago, Stoglin averaged 11.4 points per game last season and hit .359 from 3-point range. He earned back-to-back ACC Rookie of the Week honors during a stretch in which he scored 20 points or more in four of five games in February.

"Terrell can flat-out score," said Turgeon. "I'm going to treat him like we did Allen Iverson when I was with the Sixers. Allen was the point and we moved him off the ball, but he was still involved with every possession... He still had the ball in his hands all the time, but he didn't have to run the team. We hope to do the same with Terrell and put him in position to be successful."

Pe'Shon Howard appeared in all 33 games for the Terrapins a year ago as a freshman and picked up eight starts. He was sixth in the ACC in assist-turnover ratio in all games (1.89), but fourth in league games (2.39). Howard will look to open the season as the Terrapins' point guard.

"I like Pe'Shon because he's willing to do whatever it takes," said Turgeon. "Pe'Shon likes to guard, really likes to defend. I'm hoping Pe'Shon can be our point guard and Terrell can play there also when Pe'Shon's out. We've got a lot to do there and a lot of decision-making for that to happen, but Pe'Shon's been great to work with."

At 6-foot-6, sophomore Mychal Parker can give the Terrapins help at the small forward spot. He averaged 1.3 points in 13 appearances last year as a freshman and has shown flashes of talent to the new coaching staff.

The Terrapins picked up a strong, versatile backcourt performer in its recruiting class when Baltimore's Nick Faust decided to attend Maryland despite the retirement of Gary Williams.

James Padgett enters his junior season poised to compete for a starting role at power forward.

"I'm really pleased with James," said Turgeon. "He's been working his tail off for us. We'll need some low-post scoring, and I think James can give us that. He's really good around the basket. I'm trying to instill some confidence in James. Hopefully we can do that and keep him confident for five months."

Berend Weijs played 23 games last season for Maryland after transferring from Harcum (Pa.) College. Extending his blocks average to a 40-minute game last season at Maryland, Weijs would have swatted 6.3 per game for the Terps. The goal for his senior season will be to add to his offensive repertoire.

"Berend has been a pleasant surprise," said Turgeon. "He's really skilled, he can score a number of ways – on the block, turn-and-face, we can stretch him and he runs the floor... He's been great since day one, since we've taken the job. My seniors, knock on wood, usually have good years. So I expect Berend to do the same."

Ashton Pankey received a medical-redshirt waiver from the NCAA after playing just three minutes last season. He had surgery at mid-season to help with a leg injury that had plagued him since his senior year of high school. Turgeon said Pankey is making progress toward being in playing shape for this year.

A late addition to the roster is 7-foot-1 Alex Len, a center from the Ukraine. To say the 2011-12 season will be one of transition for Len is an understatement, but his arrival in College Park is all about "upside."

"Right now, Alex is a little overwhelmed by the process," said Turgeon. "He's in class about six hours a day with extensive English. The pace of the game is a little too fast for him right now, but each day he gets a little better."

Sophomore forward John Auslander sat out last season in College Park after transferring from Division III Greensboro College.

Who We Are

Founded in 1994 by former US Ambassador, Peter Teeley, CCF has distributed more than $8.2 million to charitable organizations that work to enhance the lives of children in the DC metro region.

Our Programs

BB&T Classic Basketball Tournament is a Washington DC-based basketball tournament that has been held annually since 1995. It is Washington's premier kick off event of the season featuring some of the most well known teams in college basketball history.

Coats for Kids – Each year, new winter coats, which are purchased through a special arrangement with Lord and Taylor, are distributed to needy children throughout the Washington DC metro region. The D.C. Children's Trust Fund has helped CCF to coordinate volunteers and the distribution of new coats to over 1800 children at the Verizon Center.

The "BasketBALL Gala" is a black-tie event attended by representatives of the Classic teams, their coaches, other sports figures, business and community leaders. There is a silent auction and the event features nationally known entertainment annually.

CCF Annual Golf Tournament - This tournament is admired as one of the best charity golf tournaments in the DC metro Region. The Golf Tournament will be held May 14, 2012 at Creighton Farms Golf Club. Register your golf foursome at www.ccfdc.org.
